Review of Death of A Salesman

On Nov. 15, 2017 Little Flower attended a play by Arthur Miller, Death of A Salesman. It followed the play word for word and was acted out very professionally. The best character portrayed was Biff. Not only did he look like a high school football player, he connected to his part unlike any other character. Happy was very detached from his part. Willy was a weird character and it felt like he was late on a lot of his lines.

I would give the play four out of five stars. If every actor was like Biff than the play would've been better. Overall we had a good time. The play was enjoyable. The play grew my understanding of the text. Our school attends this play at the Bay Street Theater every year. We are looking forward to next year.

*You've made a difference as Thanksgiving Day approaches
Our blessings we recall
The things we are most thankful we recollect
And you are really special in all
You say and do
You've made a difference in our lives
We're thankful now for you*
